

Creating Healthier Places: a shared responsibility

The NSW Branch of AHPA in collaboration with the HPU SLHD have organised an exciting cutting edge presentation on creating healthier environments and places.

We have two very experienced and erudite speakers

Susan Thompson Professor of Planning and Head of the City Wellbeing Program at UNSW

Susan's long and fruitful academic career focuses on research and teaching in social and cultural planning and the interdisciplinary area of healthy urban planning. Susan has received many awards including the prestigious Sidney Luker Memorial Medal in 2015.

Susan will focus on how health is increasingly part of strategic urban planning and practice and the importance of collaborative and respectful working relationships.

Jane Threlfall Principal Urban Designer with the Government Architect NSW (GANSW)

Jane has widespread experience in architecture and urban design both in Australia and the UK. Her work and role now with the GA NSW is focused on design advocacy for public good. Jane is responsible for providing strategic design advice across government agencies and developing guidance to support good design outcomes for NSW.

Jane's presentation will focus on the development of two GA NSW policies: 1. Better Placed and 2. Greener Places and show how shared responsibility and implementation can lead to healthier built environments.

VENUE: Ironbark Room at Strathfield Library, 65-67 Rochester Street, Homebush

WHEN

27 February 2018

TIME

5.30 – 7.30

FREE

RSVP for catering

Please RSVP HERE
for catering purposes

Join via webinar HERE
(essential to register)

QUERIES
nswbranch@
healthpromotion.org.au