
AHPA® National Health Promotion Learning and Teaching Award

The National Health Promotion Learning and Teaching Award has been established to recognise individual achievement within the Australian Health Promotion Association (AHPA), contributing to its purpose of “Leadership, advocacy and workforce development for health promotion practice, research, evaluation and policy”. The Award provides an opportunity to recognise the valuable contribution and commitment of learning and teaching academics to workforce development in Australia.

Criteria

Significant contribution to:

- Innovative approaches to teaching that support students to develop their IUHPE Core Competencies and Professional Standards for Health Promotion.
- Development of resources and curricula that reflect contemporary health promotion.
- Assessment and evaluation processes that influence improvements in learning and teaching in health promotion.
- Leadership or scholarship that enhances the health promotion student experience.

How to apply

- The Nominator should complete the enclosed Nomination Form including responses against the specific criteria to support the nomination (adhering to specified word counts).
- A two page CV for the nominee should also be submitted with the application.
- The Nomination Form should be signed by the Nominator.
- E-mail completed form/s to the AHPA President at national@healthpromotion.org.au by the date and time noted on the AHPA website.

General Eligibility

- Nominees should be current individual AHPA members. Nominators can be individual or organisational members.
- Late applications will not be considered.
- Forms that are not fully or correctly completed will not be considered.

Judging Process

- A panel will be convened to assess received applications.
- The panel comprises up to three individuals: the current Chair of the Health Promotion Learning and Teaching Community of Practice; one member of the AHPA Board; and one additional member (nominated at the discretion of the panel).
- The panel use the award criteria to assess the nominations.
- The panel may decide to make no award depending on the merit of the nominations.
- The panel’s decision will be final.

Award

- The associated prize for each award is a 12 month individual AHPA membership, payable when the next membership renewal is due (i.e. payment of the subsequent annual membership fee).
- The Award will be presented yearly at AHPA’s AGM or end of year event at the Board’s discretion.
