Health Promotion Registration Application Tips and Overview of the Online Application System

Application Tips

- Use same language as competency descriptions to describe knowledge and experience
- Experience does not have to be the biggest or most senior
- Use more than 1 example if needed
- New graduates from non-accredited courses need to gain 2 years experience to apply
- Assessment process may take time

Practical Tips

- Plan first: identify examples based on evidence available
- Draft (or keep a copy) using the sample application template
- Draft brief responses – small (200) word limits
- Will take about the same time to draft as a job application
- Let your employer know you are going to apply
- Use “I” statements
- Don’t assume knowledge of your local context

Core Competency Suggestions for Academics

Enable Change: Shared research that details the barriers to creating a supportive environment for health and wellbeing in a range of settings

Advocate for Health: Published an article in The Conversation advocating for a particular health issue by providing relevant research data

Mediate Through Partnership: Established a research partnership with members from a range of sectors to trial a health and wellbeing initiative

Communication: Developed key messages and a video to communicate key findings of a gambling research project

Leadership: Developed a funding proposal and led a large research study focused on elimination of cervical cancer

Assessment: Planned and implemented a survey of young people to understand their social inclusion needs to use as formative data

Planning: Planned a research study focused on increasing gender equity which included the development of measurable, achievable and sustainable goals

Implementation: Worked with the Aboriginal community to implement a pilot focused on culturally appropriate breast screening

Evaluation and Research: Followed research protocols and obtained ethics clearance to undertake collaborative research into effective ways to increase mental wellbeing in specific settings

Enable Change

Performance Criteria - evidence provided either from documentation, or from assessment during work or study, of the applicant's ability.

Enable Change: enables individuals, groups, communities and organisations to build capacity for health promoting action to improve health and reduce health inequities. A Health Promotion practitioner is able to:

- 7a. Contribute to collaborative work with stakeholders across specified sectors that aim to develop or change policies, and/or change health or other services, to promote health and wellbeing, reduce health inequities, and promote sustainable action in a specified area.
- 7b. Demonstrate an ability to select appropriate change management and organisational development approaches to support the creation of health promoting environments and/or settings in a specified area, and show how the approaches used support, participation empowerment, partnership and equity.
- 7c. Select and use appropriate community development approaches for a specified community, and show how the methods used can lead to strengthened participation, ownership and Health Promotion capacity.
- 7d. Use appropriate behavioural change techniques for individuals or groups to facilitate the development of personal skills to maintain or improve health, and develop the capacity of others to support behavioural change.

Show More

Please provide a summary of health promotion work that you have done that demonstrates the performance criteria for this standard. At least 50% of your examples must describe work done in the last five years. If more than one activity is referred to please list as A, B, C, D in each section.
